Accountability Letters to Victims

Congratulations on your decision to write a letter to your victim taking responsibility for your crime. Please remember these points:

- The letter is voluntary.
- Participation in this program is an opportunity for you to make amends and acknowledge the damage caused by the crime you committed.
- While an apology can be included, this letter should be about your accountability and remorse.
- The letter should display a true understanding of the physical, emotional and financial loss your actions have caused.
- Your victim may choose not to receive your letter or respond.
- You are not ready to write the letter if you expect forgiveness from your victim.
- Your victim might like to hear what you are doing to change your criminal behavior.

THANK YOU!

Accountability Letter Program Offender Request to Participate

Please give this form and your letter to a case manager, treatment specialist, victim services staff or supervising officer. You may mail it to the MDOC address on the bottom of this form. Do not mail or attempt to deliver a letter to a victim yourself or through another party. If you are writing letters to more than one victim, please submit a separate form with each.

Today's date:
Your name:
DOC ID #

Please provide any information that might help MDOC contact your victim to notify him or her about your letter. If possible, include full names and last known addresses. Victims include survivors, adult guardians of minor victims, witnesses, businesses and communities:

Accountability Letter Bank Victim Programs Manager Montana Department of Corrections PO BOX 201301 Helena, MT 59620

ACKNOWLEDGING THE IMPACT

Montana Department of Corrections
Victim Programs

Accountability Letters to Victims

A brochure for offenders

Accountability Letters Questions & Answers

What is an accountability letter?

Individuals who commit crimes often have deep remorse for the harm they caused and would like their victims to know they have accepted responsibility. The Montana Department of Corrections (MDOC) encourages offenders to write letters to their victims demonstrating their accountability.

The letters are placed in a locked letter bank at MDOC. Victim services staff attempt to notify your victim you have written an accountability letter. Victims decide whether or not to receive your letter. Many victims want to see what their offenders have to say.

How do these letters help victims?

Victims often remain fearful of their offenders. They may relive the terror they felt during the crime and the threats of retaliation some offenders make at the time of arrest or sentencing.

A sincere letter promising no further harm can lessen a victim's fear. Your victim might like to read, in your own words, how you have changed through programming, treatment and self-reflection. Reassurances you intend no further harm may help your victim begin the healing process.

What if I'm not a good writer?

Write honestly and from the heart. Your thoughts are what are important. Ask a friend, case manager or supervising officer for help. If your handwriting is difficult to read, perhaps you can type the letter.

Will others read my letter?

MDOC Victim Services staff will review your letter and may make suggestions. Letters using inappropriate language, threaten harm or contain content not directly related to accountability will be returned. You can rewrite your letter and resubmit.

MDOC Victim Services staff understands an accountability letter contains private thoughts you have decided to share with your victim. Once letters are accepted by the Victim Programs Manager, they are placed in a locked file. If the victim, or guardian of the victim chooses to accept the letter it will be forwarded.

Will the parole board see my letter?

Accountability letters do not become part of your MDOC file and Parole Board Members will not know you have written a letter unless you tell them.

Will my victim forgive me?

A decision to forgive someone is personal. Please do not request forgiveness because your victim is not responsible for your needs. The meaning of forgiveness varies among individuals and cultures. Your victim will forgive you if and when he or she is ready. Be careful that a lack of forgiveness does not become your excuse to remain "stuck" in criminal thinking.

Can I mail the letter to my victim?

No. Receiving mail from the offender can shock and cause further harm to the victim. Sending the letter yourself could result in disciplinary action for breaking your supervision rules and/or criminal prosecution for violating an order of protection.

How will I know if the victim receives and reads my letter?

Unless your victim chooses to acknowledge the letter, you will not know whether or not he or she received it. Even if your victim never sees your letter, writing it may help you cope with guilt, shame, remorse and other feelings about your crime. This can lead to healing for you.